

Executive Compensation

HR's Elite

A ranking of the 40 highest-paid HR executives listed in SEC filings.

Produced exclusively for Human Resource Executive by Equilar Inc. of San Mateo, Calif., the following list ranks the 40 highest-paid HR executives at publicly traded companies where the HR leader's compensation is among the top five of all officers.

In compiling the ranking, Equilar pulled the data from the latest Securities and Exchange Commission filings (as of May 31, 2003). In determining the total compensation, the company looked at salary, bonus, total value of options granted (using Black-Scholes), restricted stock and long-term incentive payouts.

As might be expected, a small percentage of HR executives (roughly 6 percent) were among the five most highly compensated. Of the roughly 2,500 public companies analyzed by Equilar, only 154 HR executives found their way into the SEC filings.

Nonetheless, the list includes some impressive numbers, though it still represents a small percentage of what the CEO pulls in. On average, the 154 HR executives earned just under 28 percent of the CEO's total compensation. Charles Bressler of Men's Wearhouse had the highest percentage, with 438.6 percent of the CEO's total comp, while Larry Costello, senior vice president of human resources at American Standard Cos., earned 5.2 percent of the CEO's total comp.

Analyzed on a per-employee basis, the HR executive's total compensation averaged $138.88 per employee. On the high end, Pam Gleason, vice president of HR at 115-employee Maxim Pharmaceuticals, took in $2,140 per employee, while, on the low end, Brian Mulvaney, executive vice president of HR and public affairs at 200,000-employee Aramark, earned $3.57 per employee.
